Busaba Eathai

"Taste of Thai"

You can generally gauge how good a restaurant is by the size of the crowd it pulls. Busaba Eathai is a large restaurant and is always packed to the rafters: one taste of the cuisine here, and you will know why! The dishes served up by this popular Thai restaurant are bursting with flavor and are reasonably well-priced; calamari, prawn green curry and smoked grilled aubergine are particular favorites washed down with a beer or a smoothie. Service is fast and efficient and the friendly staff is always willing to offer suggestions.

Nipa

"Welcome to Thailand"

Nipa, an award-winning Thai restaurant, is the twin sister of the Nipa in Bangkok's Landmark Hotel. Whether you judge it on its delicious cuisine, subtle oriental decor or welcoming ambiance, it's one of the most authentic Thai eating experiences in Europe. Nipa is also one of an elite selection of Thai restaurants in the UK to have received the "Thai Select" award from the Thai Government for restaurants proven to have achieved the highest standards of quality and cuisine. To perfectly compliment this, Nipa has also received a 2 AA Rosette for its precise, authentic cooking with incredible attention to detail.

Esarn Kheaw

"Thai Delights"

This warm and friendly restaurant brings a taste of the verdant Esarn area of North-East Thailand to West London. Its tropical décor lends itself to the informal atmosphere with its tasty, authentic food. This is a definite place to visit for lovers of Thai cuisine, since the menu offers not only classic staple dishes, but also more obscure regional delicacies. For those who are relative novices, the staff are always willing to make suggestions or adjust the spiciness of their often fiery dishes.
