Eataly NYC

"Italian Style"

Located on Fifth Avenue across from Madison Square Park, Eataly is all about the delights from the peninsula. This mega-mart of Italian cuisine has an incredible amount of comestibles to eat inside or to take home. The entire market layout is ultra clean, a bit confusing and always crowded. With several restaurants within the market, Eataly may be a little overwhelming at times. Also, you may have to wait a long time to get a table, but if you look hard enough there might be space to fit in somewhere to sample a few wines, cheeses, meats or whatever else you can think of that has a "Made in Eataly" stamp on it. Who doesn't like the idea of being able to drink a glass of wine while you shop? Eataly NYC is great for a fun shopping and sampling experience of the Italian kind.

Manhattan Mall

"The Cents Of Location"

Manhattan Hall is crowded and not particularly attractive. Nevertheless, many New Yorkers come here to buy their clothes and gifts, ignoring other malls in the city. That is because Manhattan Mall is near so many popular stores like Toys R Us, Macy's, a number of shoe stores, Barnes and Noble and the Burlington Coat Factory. What is more, the mall is located directly on top of a subway station. The largest shop in Manhattan Mall is the department store Stern's. Others include Ann Taylor, Nine West and JC Penney.
